

SHERRY HAMILTON / GAZETTE-JOURNAL

Long lines have become a daily occurrence at the Mathews County Treasurer and Commissioner of the Revenue offices because of the DMV Select services offered there on a first-come, first-served basis. Treasurer Wendy Stewart said transactions have gone from fewer than 50 per day to more than 250 per day as people from as far away as the North Carolina line drive to Mathews for vehicle registrations and other vehicle-related DMV services.

Mathews offices staying busy providing DMV services

BY SHERRY HAMILTON

The Mathews County Treasurer and Commissioner of the Revenue offices are staying busy these days providing DMV Select services to customers from all across the region.

Treasurer Wendy Stewart said lines began to form on a daily basis shortly after the offices reopened eight weeks ago, subsequent to coronavirus pandemic closures. The transaction count quickly went from the usual fewer than 50 per day to more than 250 per day, she said, as people from as far away as the North Carolina border learned they could get their registrations renewed and conduct a number of other transactions in Mathews without a prior appointment.

Many of the customers they're getting, said Stewart, are newly-arrived military personnel who can't get on base until their vehicles are registered in Virginia. On Monday morning, Adrena Hanley of Atlanta, Georgia, was holding a place in line for her son, who was recently stationed in Norfolk. She said she came up to visit and they drove to Mathews together so he could get his car registered. Four other people in the long line said they were from Gloucester, Newport News, Williamsburg and Richmond.

Stewart said that such a small office handling so many transactions is difficult, "but we're trying to do the best we can." If people are in line by 2 p.m., she said the office will serve them. After that, an orange cone goes up to indicate no more customers will be accepted. She said employees had worked after 5 p.m. on a number of occasions in order to accommodate everyone.

Out of all of the people who have had to wait outside in the heat or rain to be served, Stewart said only three had been disrespectful, and the sheriff's office had to be summoned to address the problems.

"All the others have been very respectful and a pleasure to serve," she said.

Initially, said Stewart, the main door to the building was kept locked, and staff members let in only four customers at a time. But she and Commissioner of the Revenue Les Hall determined that created a greater risk for exposure to the coronavirus than just leaving the main door open and keeping employees behind their locked doors and glass enclosures.

While the DMV Select office in Mathews provides a number of vehicle-related services, Stewart emphasized that the office does not issue driver's licenses, learner's permits, identification cards or vital records.

BMP cost share signup begins Monday

The Tidewater Soil and Water Conservation District is holding a signup for the Virginia Agricultural Best Management Practices Cost Share program for eligible farmers in Gloucester, Mathews and Middlesex counties beginning Monday and running through Aug. 7.

This is the time to sign up for all best management practices, with an emphasis on cover crops, according to a Tidewater SWCD release. The program offers cost share assistance to farmers as an incentive to carry out construction or implementation of selected BMPs in order to reduce non-point source pollution.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the office is limiting to one guest at a time. If you plan to sign up in-person, call 804-699-3482 to be sure they can accommodate you.

Master Gardeners to be at Brent and Becky's

Gloucester Master Gardeners will be at Brent and Becky's Bulbs, Ware Neck, on Saturday, answering questions from the public.

At 9 a.m., Bob Beyea will speak on the topic, "How Plants Work." This is open to the public, as is a meeting of Master Gardeners at 10 o'clock, followed by another talk at 11.

Sessions are free of charge.

Plans for Atlantic Coast Pipeline shelved

Plans for the Atlantic Coast Pipeline, a natural gas pipeline that would have stretched some 600 miles from West Virginia through Virginia to eastern North Carolina, have been canceled, Dominion Energy and Duke Energy announced on Sunday.

The companies said that the cancelation was due to ongoing delays and increasing cost uncertainty which had threatened the economic viability of the project.

A series of legal challenges to the project's federal and state permits has caused significant project cost increases and timing delays, a release stated.

As a result, recent public guidance of project cost has increased to $8 billion from the original estimate of $4.5 billion to $5 billion. In addition, the most recent public estimate of commercial in-service in early 2022 represents a nearly three-and-a-half-year delay with uncertainty remaining.

According to the two companies, the project was initially announced in 2014 in response to a lack of energy supply and delivery diversification for millions of families, businesses, schools, and national defense installations across North Carolina and Virginia. The leaders of the two companies—Dominion Energy chairman, president and CEO Thomas F. Farrell II and Duke Energy chair, president and CEO Lynn J. Good—released the following joint statement on the decision:

"We regret that we will be unable to complete the Atlantic Coast Pipeline. For almost six years we have worked diligently and invested billions of dollars to complete the project and deliver the much-needed infrastructure to our customers and communities. Throughout we have engaged extensively with and incorporated feedback from local communities, labor and industrial leaders, government and permitting agencies, environmental interests and social justice organizations. We express sincere appreciation for the tireless efforts and important contributions made by all who were involved in this essential project. This announcement reflects the increasing legal uncertainty that overhangs large-scale energy and industrial infrastructure development in the United States. Until these issues are resolved, the ability to satisfy the country's energy needs will be significantly challenged."

4.9 million PPP loans issued to businesses, nonprofits

Approximately 4.9 million loans totaling more than $521 billion were made to businesses and nonprofits under the Paycheck Protection Program as of June 30, the U.S. Small Business Administration announced Monday.

"The PPP is an indisputable success for small businesses, especially to the communities in which these employers serve as the main job creators," said SBA Administrator Jovita Carranza. "Today's data shows that small businesses of all types and across all industries benefited from this unprecedented program, and last week's jobs numbers reinforce that PPP is keeping employees on payroll and sustaining millions of small businesses."

Monday's release includes loan-level data, including business names, addresses, NAICS codes, zip codes, business type, demographic data, nonprofit information, name of lender, jobs supported, and loan amount—accounting for nearly 75 percent of the loan dollars approved. For all loans below $150,000, SBA is releasing information except for business names and addresses. The data release also includes overall statistics regarding dollars lent per state, loan amounts, top lenders, and distribution by industry.

"There is great news for American small businesses across the program," said SBA Mid-Atlantic Regional Administrator Steve Bulger. "Twenty seven percent of the program's reach went to low- and moderate-income areas, which reflects the population in these communities. The average loan size of about $100,000, demonstrates that the program is truly serving small of businesses."

Farm Boards business taking off in Mathews

BY TYLER BASS

Mathews residents know all about the beautiful waterways that go through the small peninsula. The water is used by locals and visitors alike for recreation during the year's warmer months. A popular way of enjoying the water is paddle boarding. A paddle board is a board that's designed for the surfer to stand on it and paddle through calm waters.

The popularity and recreation of paddle boarding caught the eye of William Berg, the owner of Farm Boards, a new business located at Foster, and led him to begin hand-making paddle boards and skim boards using his own methods.

Berg built his first board when he needed a new skim board and found that the prices had skyrocketed compared to what they were when he bought his last one. He decided to instead make one for himself and then one for a friend who saw Berg's creation and had to have one, as well.

Berg decided to add paddle boards to his repertoire after one day at the beach where he noticed a family who had paddled up to shore. He said that the children and their grandparents were both enjoying the boards, and he realized that it was something that was for all age ranges.

He noted that skim boards appeal to a younger crowd but paddle boards could be used by all. He also realized that Mathews was a "hidden gem for paddle boarding" because, although the county may be small, it's filled with beaches and smooth rivers that are ideal for paddle boarding.

Berg's business began three years ago in Gloucester, then he moved to Mathews to set up shop. He said that the process of getting his business license in Mathews was easy, and the people were incredibly welcoming.

The name Farm Boards came to him while he was building boards far away from any water, on a farm. Berg said that he felt "ludicrous" that he was in a field building a board on a farm, but the name stuck.

It's important to Berg that he does whatever he can to build his boards out of products that are made in the United States. This includes the handles, which Berg noted are larger and more comfortable than the ones found on other boards on the market.

The only things that aren't made in the U.S. are the leash plugs, which are 3D printed in China. However, Berg has ordered his own 3D printer and will soon be making them himself.

Part of what he said makes his boards unique is that he builds them to last. Berg said that it bothered him that someone would spend hundreds or a thousand dollars on a cool-looking board to just have the paint chip and fade away over a few years. Berg puts the colors for his board in the resin, so that they're built in. He also can place decals within the board to provide those extra personal touches.

It also bothered Berg that people would cover their boards in large traction pads. So, Berg decided to build those into the board as well. The deck pads on the board are part of the resin, and can be customizable to a person's preference. He can even build in clips for GoPro cameras.

As part of the building process, Berg has his customer tell him height and weight so he can make a board the right size for the individual. The customer can also tell him if they tend to have passengers such as children or a dog on the board so he knows how much padding and room a board might need.

Berg said he does what he can to keep his building process as environmentally friendly as possible. His process minimizes sanding and he recycles a lot of the excess materials that are used. In the future he would like to offer tree sap resin as an alternative to the epoxy resin to be as green-focused as possible.

"If a kid takes care of their board, they can surf it forever," he said.

One of Berg's most recent orders was a skim board for a 5-year-old. The family posted a video of the child riding it, and he was "just ripping it up," said Berg, who joked that the child was Farm Boards' youngest team rider.

Berg said he was "stoked" to bring his business to Mathews because of the county's history in shipbuilding. He said that the house he lives in had seven brothers grow up there, all of whom became ship captains. To him the business feels like a continuation of that history.

Currently, it takes Berg about three to four days to construct a full-sized board after ordering. Along with the boards, people can also purchase Farm Boards hats, T-shirts, and bags. He also offers different methods for delivery and pickup of the products.
